

POLICE PISTOLS STOP THUGS WHO HELD UP GIRL

Three Bullets Whiz in Chase of Pair Through Harlem Streets.

ATTACKED IN SHADOW.

Miss Stallmann Dazed by Blow After Purse Is Snatched.

After a chase in which three shots were fired, Policeman Carmack and Detective Newman, of the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station, captured, early to-day, two men who are said to have confessed having last night held up and robbed Anna Stallmann, a servant employed by W. J. Haywood, at No. 567 West One Hundred and Fortieth street.

The girl had been downtown visiting friends and reached the Subway station at One Hundred and Thirty-seventh street and Broadway soon after midnight. She started to take a short cut home through Hamilton place. As she passed a building in the course of erection, two men leaped from its shadows, and while one pinned her arms the other took her purse, containing a few dollars.

Then the younger of the two men struck her in the face and they both took to their heels. Dazed by the blow, she wandered about till she met Policeman Carmack and gave him a good description of her assailants.

Some hours later the policeman notified two men who answered the description going into a barroom at One Hundred and Fortieth street and Amsterdam avenue. He followed them in, having first telephoned to the station-house for help. When they saw the blue uniform the two men started to run, followed by the policeman. They headed for the building of the College of the City of New York.

Fearing to lose them, Carmack fired two shots and then a third, when the men stopped, and as Newman, who had heard the shots, arrived on the run, both men were arrested. At the police station they said they were Nero Dunnis, twenty-seven years old, a student, and Charles Sayles, twenty-one years old, a horse trader. According to the police they admitted having robbed the girl.

GIRLS SCARED BY SMOKE FROM A VERY SMALL FIRE.

Employees in Klaw & Erlanger's
Costuming Department Make Unnecessary Dash for Safety.

There was a little fire with a whole lot of smoke to-day in the vacant fourth floor of the seven-story building at No. 123 West Thirty-fourth street. On the story above is the costuming department of Klaw & Erlanger. Thirty or forty girls were at work there making theatrical gowns when the smoke came up the staircase. Some of the young women wanted to faint, and one or two felt for just a tiny moment like jumping out of a window.

John J. Black, the elevator man, took some of them down the stairs, and five or six very adventurous spirits stayed behind to see Black put out the young blaze with an extinguisher.

Fire engines came, but they were not needed. The damage could be computed in cents.

DEPEW ONLY SURVIVOR.

BURLINGTON, N. J., Feb. 12.—Charles W. Gardner, buried yesterday from his home here, was one of two sole survivors of the fire which destroyed the Kane Lodge, F. and A. M. Lodge, No. 10, York City. The other survivor is Senator Chauncey M. Depew. A delegation of New York Masons attended the funeral.

Police Dogs to Mingle With Pampered Canine Aristocrats and Show Their Stunts in Madison Square Garden

Of Course, They'll Be Received as "Cheap Mutts" and Treated With Disdain
by 2,006 Proud Pets Already There.

BEST BOW WOW EXHIBIT
EVER HELD IS NOW ON.

There Are 55 Different Breeds,
Including Every Size,
Shape and Color Known to Fanciers, From Toys to Great Danes.

There was a great deal of disdainful sniffing and turning up of noses at Madison Square Garden to-day when it was announced that Commissioner Blinham's dog sleuths would arrive to-morrow night and give a demonstration of their superiority over the "malefactors of great wealth" of their species who have been monopolizing attention because of the amount of money they represent.

"Such stunk-up mutts!" scornfully yelled a dainty lilliputian in the concert hall. "The idea! Why, my maid tells me they cost only $10!"

But Lieut. Wakefield will run the gamut of 2,000 protesting canine voices and put his dog detectives through their paces just the same. The policeman animals, who will be temporarily in the background, will not be at liberty to "start anything," even if they didn't know how very vulgar it is to mix up with creatures that work for a living, for they will be properly restrained.

Hence the large crowd that will certainly witness the first public demonstration of New York's dog squad can depend on it there will be nothing more serious than a snubbing. It will be the feature of the thirty-second annual bench show of the Westminster Kennel Club, which began yesterday and lasts four days.

Largest Show on Record.

It is the largest dog show on record and had an encouraging opening. Those who couldn't understand the dog vocabulary as given in the fifty-seven varieties of yelps, barks, whines and growls found the friendly wagging of tails a good substitute. And the label of sounds did not represent a wider dissemination of canine nature than the appearance of the specimens themselves. There were all sizes, shapes and colors.

There would be no way for the layman to tell that some of them were dogs were it not for the labels and the assurances of the keepers. They are all well-mannered and wigwag a welcome to persons of high degree as well as those who come in on passes.

The main floor is devoted to the larger breeds, and the aristocratic terriers, Boston terriers have the south gallery, while English and French bulldogs and Scotch and Welsh terriers are sprinkled through the north gallery. The little fellows are content in the warm concert hall.

There are 104 in the toy varieties, representing all colors from ebony to white. The Russian wolfhound group is the best ever seen in this country.

Keeps Seventeen Experts Busy.

Seventeen experts have been engaged to award the prizes, many of the exhibitors being put through their wrinkles in six rings, occupying the main floor. Sporting dogs had a large share of the program yesterday, and the disappointed animals themselves did not make more noise than some of their owners at a few of the awards.

Later in the week there is to be a competition for foxhounds, in which a picked lot of the Grafton Hunt's hounds will show against the best American foxhounds. American hounds will compete among themselves, and the English likewise.

A feature of this year's show are the Irish wolfhounds, which have not been seen in this country for many years. They are the largest of all dogs, and are said to be as fast as the wind.

The rest of the dog show might howl and bark their jealousy of the favored little coterie which is judged by the cat's paw. The Pomeranians carried off the honors so far as the women were concerned yesterday.

The best of the dog show might howl and bark their jealousy of the favored little coterie which is judged by the cat's paw. The Pomeranians carried off the honors so far as the women were concerned yesterday.

Judges Go to Tiny Dogs' Homes.

As of yesterday and until closing, a ring on the main floor was used to judge the tiny dogs. While the premium sized ones were taken into rings in the improvised balconies overlooking the main floor, the tiny fellows had to be kept in their own warm rooms and were judged there. Sixty-three distinct little coterie were judged by the cat's paw, but when they are classified still further by the judges there will be 350.

Beautiful little specimens of Pomeranians were shown by the Misses Chalmers. Among them was Silver Frail, the only "smoky" dog ever shown. She was Anna Smith's Tom Patch. Little attracted the admiring glances of many.

William Perkins, Jr., of the New York Bloodhound Club, showed a bloodhound named "The Great Dane" which he had bred.

The usual fashionable throng gathered for the first day function, which came to be an exhibition. Among those around the tables yesterday were William Perkins, Jr., of the New York Bloodhound Club, showed a bloodhound named "The Great Dane" which he had bred.

ROOSEVELT TOO EASY ON TRUSTS, RAYNER ASSERTS

Senator Says Jail, Not Fines, Should Be Penalty of Malefactors.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 12.—Senator Rayner, of Maryland, speaking on the Aldrich Currency bill to-day, said to the Senate that he realized that the bill will pass and declared that its opponents have the consolation of knowing that "it is simply and solely an emergency measure."

After outlining what he considered faults in the currency system of this Government, he said:

"The truth is that the money in this country is not equitably distributed; that it is concentrated at points that dominate the banking interests, and that the people who need the money are unable to procure it when the necessity arises, and are sacrificed to gratify and appease the demands that are concentrated around the financial centers."

"We will never have any permanent relief until we strike at the root of the evil and reform our entire banking system from its foundations. In the interests of the American people against the special interests."

Wall Street Has It All.
"The savages upon the banks of a Senegambian river, with elephants' teeth and the bark of a mulberry tree as a circulating medium, have a better system of finance than ours."

If the country and city banks have on hand only 6 per cent. and 1-1/2 per cent. respectively of the reserve deposits, Mr. Rayner wanted to know why they have no money, but why they have the money, he said he supposed the stock market has it, to a large extent. Continuing, he said:

"So, gentlemen of the South and West, when you want to move your crops, do not apply to the banks, but apply to the stock market, and you will find the New York Stock Exchange for permission to do so."

Roosevelt Too Easy.

"I appeal to this body," he said, "not to pass a bill which perpetually declines to make any change whatever in this system of reserves and permits this blundering and flagrant injustice to perpetuate the degradation of the United States."

"The President of the United States has also, with the best intentions, unconsciously contributed to the misfortune that have overtaken us. I unite with him in the warfare that he is waging against the violators of the law and the oppressors of the people."

When it comes to the Standard Oil Company and other kindred alliances, no man in this chamber would go to a greater length than I am willing to go in driving them, if possible, from the face of the republic. I differ, however, with the President in his method of assault.

"Malefactors should receive penal punishment, and a whole generation of innocent people ought not to suffer for sins of their oppressors. One day of imprisonment would do the work better than all the heaviest laws that can be piled upon the oppressors; they represent a offer with the President in his remedies, because he has suggested one after another utterly in-possible of accomplishment by the Federal Government.

What Are Values?

"The President in his last message says that before an investment is made the purchaser should inquire into the management of a railroad. What a recovery and a dream this is! How is it possible for a trustee, acting for his ward in chancery, or for any one else, to conduct an investigation into the management of the great trunk line systems of the United States? The diagnosis of the President is perfectly correct, but in most of the instances he cites his remedies are either unlawful or impracticable. From the violent fervor of his utterances, there is an idea running through the public mind that he has come to the conclusion that every man engaged in a large business enterprise is a malefactor, and that every good citizen of the land ought to spend at least one term in the penitentiary."

Mr. Rayner closed with a declaration that the financial question should not be regarded as a party issue.

MADDER AFTER TURF HONORS IN EUROPE

Has Entries in Derby, Oaks and Grand Prix—His Son Will Ride.

J. E. Madden, the horseman, and his two sons, Eddie, aged fourteen, and Joe, aged eight, were passengers aboard the Carolina, of the Cunard line, arriving to-day. The boys will return at once to their home at Lexington, Ky. The father goes to Washington, where he has fifty-four horses in training.

Mr. Madden told of some interesting plans of his for the coming season's racing abroad.

"I will have nine entries for the English Derby, six for the Oaks and four for the Paris Grand Prix," he said. "No American-bred horse has won the Derby since Pierre Lorillard's Ironclad captured it years ago. I am going after it in earnest."

Then Mr. Madden added another tidbit of news.

"Several of my entries on the other side," he said, "will be ridden this year by Eddie, my own son. He weighs 92 pounds and I will back him against any professional jockey for judgment, sense and strength. I am going to raise my boys in the same business which I have followed and they will start where a real horseman should start—in the stable and in the saddle."

Eddie Madden, a handsome, slender little fellow, grinned in appreciation of his father's words. Madden, Jr., didn't think so much of the Pyramids, but he said the stables of W. K. Vanderbilt, Sr., just outside of Paris, were the most things in Europe, not barring even the art galleries.

HIS PRINTS SACRILEGIOUS.

That's What Comstock Said of a Book Dealer's Window Exhibits.

Charles A. Vane, a book dealer, of No. 54 West Broadway, was arraigned to-day in the Centre Street Court to-day charged by Anthony Comstock with exposing in the window of his shop prints of a sacrilegious character.

Comstock described one of the prints as an "outrageous affront to decency and religion." The prisoner waived examination and was held in $200 bail for Special Sessions.

No Extra Charge for It.

MET DEMANDS OF BLACK HAND WITH BULLETS

This Man Used a Revolver and Brought Down One Blackmailer.

If a few of the men the Black Hand terrorists pick out for victims had the sense of Michael Pollicino there would soon be no Black Hand problem on the hands of the police. Pollicino lives at No. 543 East Thirtieth street and has some money. A few days ago he got a letter asking him to meet two men at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and Second avenue and hand them $250 to prepare himself for death.

Pollicino went to the rendezvous armed with a large, well-filled revolver. Two men approached him and asked him for the money. He opened fire on them, bringing down one, Charles Dimarco, of No. 223 East One Hundred and Seventh street. The other man got away, but Pollicino recognized him as Alexander Scoda, who lived at the East Thirtieth street address.

Up to the time Pollicino met the blackmailers with bullets he had not taken the trouble to report to the police, but when they asked him why he had shot Dimarco he told them. Then Lieut. Murphy and Patrolman Coffey, of the Fifth street station, were assigned to help Pollicino find Scoda. They found him to-day hiding in his flat in the house in Thirtieth street. Magistrate Walsh in Harlem Court held him in $3000 bail.

DIVORCE? ABSURD! SAYS MRS. 'TAY PAY'

Coming Back to Arrange Lecture Tour for Husband,
She Says, as She Sails.

Mrs. T. P. O'Connor, wife of the famous "Tay Pay" Irish Member of Parliament, took passage to Southampton to-day on the White Star line's Oceanic. Mrs. O'Connor laughed at the story that divorce proceedings were to be instituted shortly by her against her husband.

"On the contrary," she declared with emphasis, "I am returning only for a short stay. These reports are contemptible. My husband had contemplated a lecture tour of America, but deems it inadvisable owing to the Presidential campaign, which will hold political interest for some time. When I return I shall make a trip to the large cities and arrange for his tour later."

Hetty King, the charming young English woman who had a very prosperous vaudeville season in America, took home with her $25,000.

WOMAN BATTLES WITH THIEF SHE FINDS IN HOME

Then Mrs. Carner Chases Him
Until a Policeman Appears and Makes Capture.

Mrs. Sarah Carner, of No. 784 Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn, returning to her apartments to-day, her arms laden with packages from the nearby grocery, discovered that the door of the dining-room was fastened from the inside.

"There's been a burglar here since I left," soliloquized the brave little woman as she rid herself of the bundles. Kicking and pushing at the door, she shouted: "Let me in! I know what you are doing!"

A chair which had been braced against the door inside fell under the woman's vigorous pounding, and confronting her as the door swung open was a roughly clad man. Mrs. Carner seized him. He struggled to escape, but the woman put up such a determined fight that he sprang to a window and dropped to a shed ten feet below. Then, leaping to the yard, he rushed through the hall into the street.

Mrs. Carner, undaunted, gave chase, and for two blocks she followed, feeling burglar until Patrolman Frees took up the pursuit and grabbed the fugitive. He described himself as Thomas Rickett, forty years old, living somewhere in East Thirty-seventh street, Manhattan. He was held in the Ewen Street Police Court in $2,000 bail.

"LITTLE MOTHER" ALONE IN HOME FATALLY BURNED

Flame From Kitchen Stove
Ignites Dress of Fannie Schoenberg.

RUNS AROUND ABLAZE.

Man in Zeal to Save Her
Adds to Agony By Throwing Water on Her.

Fannie Schoenberg, a thirteen-year-old East Side little mother, died at Bellevue to-day from the effects of burns received a few hours before at her home, No. 64 East Sixth street. The stupidity of a man in a little crowd that watched her as she tore in agony at her burning clothing destroyed what chance she had of surviving her injuries. This man threw a bucket of water over her, and the contact of the fluid with her blistered flesh aggravated the burns.

Fannie was a cheerful, pretty child and a great favorite in the neighborhood because of her ability to translate English and German into Yiddish. She was the letter writer for a great many of the older people on the block in which she lived.

In the absence of her mother from home to-day she swept the flat, and wrapping the sweepings in a newspaper threw the bundle into the kitchen stove. A sheet of flame swept out and communicated to her flimsy dress.

Frantic with fright and pain the little girl ran into the hall and up the stairs to the next floor, where she stood in a strong draught pulling at her blistered hands as her blazing dress, while half a dozen men and women stood around and gazed at her in helpless bewilderment.

With the best of intentions one of the men got a bucket of water and performed the most deadly service in his power. Joseph Schwartz and his wife, Lily, then reached the scene and tried to beat out the flames with their bare hands. They were painfully burned. A couple of street cleaners who had heard the screams of the child ran in, tore a carpet from the hall stairs and finally succeeded in extinguishing the fire.

Because of the snow piles in the street there was considerable delay in procuring an ambulance. Everything possible was done for the child at Bellevue Hospital, but the surgeons sent a telegram to the mother at noon informing her that if she wished to see her child alive she would have to hurry.

FIFTEEN YEARS OF KEEN SUFFERING

Rheumatism Developed Burning,
Painful Sores on Legs—Tortured
Day and Night—Tried All Kinds of Remedies to No Avail—Wife
Had Debility and Pains in Back.

BOTH USED CUTICURA
AND ARE WELL AGAIN

"My husband had been a great sufferer from rheumatism for nearly fifteen years. At first it was in his bones, but after a while it was in the flesh and finally running sores broke out on his legs, from below the knees to the ankles. There are no words to tell all the discomfort and great suffering he had to endure night and day. He used every kind of remedy and three physicians treated him, one after the other, without any good results whatever. So one day I happened to read about Cuticura Remedies. I asked him if he would not try them. 'No,' said he, 'it's no use, I've spent enough money now.' The next day I ordered five dollars' worth of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. He began to use them without confidence but after three weeks all the sores were dried up. The burning fire stopped, and the pain became bearable. After three months he was quite well. Two years later the pains and sores came back after he had been working hard and had taken cold. But as soon as he used Cuticura again it cured him. Two years ago I used Cuticura Pills for general debility. They did me a great deal of good and made me well. Three months since I had pain in my back and Cuticura took them away, too. I can prove this testimony at any time. Mrs. V. V. Albert, Upper Frenchville, Me., July 21, 1907."
